Describe the character briefly. <input type="checkbox"/> Describe the actions of the character you think is unkind. <input type="checkbox"/> Say why you think the character is unkind. <input type="checkbox"/> Refer to the information in the novel. <input type="checkbox"/> Explain what lesson you learn from this incident The Pearl  One of the incidents in 'The Pearl' by John Steinback which I considered unkind is the doctor's action of turning away the sick Coyotito. Of all the characters, the one that I dislike most is the doctor due to his unethical behaviour. When Coyotito was stung by the scorpion, his parents took him to the doctor but the doctor refused to give the treatment to him. He only treats those who can afford and demands to see the money before he treats anyone. He is greedy and discontent. I feel that both his relative wealth and weight come from his continuous oppression of the people. He even thinks of the Indians as animals. Referring to Kino's request for the treatment, he says, "I'm a doctor, not a veterinary." His attitude is the opposite of good doctors who are supposed to treat everybody equally. However, when he discovers that Kino own the great pearl, he smugly announces to the villagers that Kino is one of the patients. Another incident that shows the cruelty of the doctor is when he finds out that the baby is getting better and his service is no longer needed, he gives the baby a white powder which later turns out to be poison. From my point of view, I feel that the doctor's actions are bad and immoral. He is the embodiment of evil and corruption in the society.
